

THE LONESOME HEROES

The Lonesome Heroes might as well print “Cosmic American” on their passports. The Austin, TX based group may hail from the “Live Music Capital of the World,” but their sound suggests they originate from a parallel universe where the works of Gram Parsons, Beck and Wilco propagate. Austin’s KUTX describes them at “the soundscape that occurs when indie rock and country artfully cross paths.”

Since the release of their sophomore album, Can’t Stand Still, in January of 2015, the troubadours have played 100+ U.S. dates, explored new continents in the name of “Cosmic American Music”, and gained accolades along the way.

Can’t Stand Still was recorded in Austin at Z Sound Recording and at Jim Eno’s (Spoon) Public Hi-Fi and mastered by Brian Lucey at Magic Garden Mastering (Beck, Black Keys, Arctic Monkeys). The album was named “one of Austin’s best discs of 2015” by the Austin Chronicle and was featured on their year-end “Top 10 Locals You Didn’t Hear” list. Their single “Steel” was selected as a Top Tune Download of the Day by KCRW in Los Angeles and received airplay on stations throughout the U.S., Europe and Australia.

Appointed as ambassadors of “Cosmic American Music”, The Lonesome Heroes were one of a handful of American acts invited to play the inaugural Dashville Skyline Music Festival in Australia. Their trip abroad included a live performance on the Australian Broadcasting Corporation’s Live and Local radio program, a feature in an Australian Rolling Stone article on the origins of Americana music and a 20 date tour along the east coast of the continent.

Upon their return, the band has continued at what they do best - pack the dance floors of saloons, bars, and clubs across America and turn indie-rockers into two-steppers (or vice-versa) by way of the rhythm of the road. In April of 2016, The Lonesome Heroes reunited with fellow Dashville Skyline artist and award-winning Aussie singer-songwriter Ruby Boots for a Texas tour that introduced her to some of the band’s favorite venues.

Following a summer tour of the Mountain States and Pacific Northwest with festival appearances in between at BMM Fest, Oregon Country Fair and What Fest, the Lonesome Heroes have begun work on a follow up to Can’t Stand Still and plan to release an EP in early 2017.

Press

"Many bands claim Gram Parsons and Big Star as influences, but few compare to such time-tested landmarks. The reconfigured Lonesome Heroes fill the bill by drawing as much from Seventies' pop as they do from a potpourri of country rock. The ear-pleasing results make for one of Austin's best discs of 2015."

- The Austin Chronicle

"Cosmic Austin-based band Lonesome Heroes' album Can't Stand Still creeps under the skin, right into your bloodstream. Western Americana fans will delight."

- KCRW 89.9 Los Angeles